Entering the Circle: Mandala Intensive

Facilitated by Marilyn F. Clark, Susan P. Johnson, Paige Scheinberg, and Special Lectures by Susanne F. Fincher

---

Sunday-Friday, May 7-12, 2017
Amerson House Retreat Center, Atlanta, Georgia

Mandalas are ancient circular designs that have psychological significance. Swiss psychoanalyst Carl Jung saw mandalas as symbols of wholeness. When we create mandalas, we can view them as messages between the unconscious parts of ourselves (outside our awareness), and that part of ourselves we call "I." This MANDALA INTENSIVE gives you the tools you need to integrate mandalas into your work as a helping professional and to use mandalas for personal growth and spiritual enrichment.

The Amerson House Retreat Center is a cozy meeting space set in a shady, Japanese inspired garden. In this lovely woodland setting, you will have opportunities to explore the Archetypal Stages of the Great Round of Mandala through art expression, journaling, and reflection. Each stage has typical mandala designs and colors rooted in the cyclical nature of life. Using a variety of media, you can create and interpret your own mandalas for each stage.

Presenters will speak on the history and psychological significance of mandalas and the meaning of color and form in mandalas. Case study presentations will demonstrate the meaning in mandalas. Carefully selected musical background deepens the experience and evokes the 12 archetypal stages being explored. The group will also be guided in the building of an outdoor mandala honoring the spring season.
